HIS BIG STORY

By JANE OSBORN.

"Get a good story at any cost," the city editor had told Tom Ordway, when he sent him out to "cover" the your not hearing from them in part. Morris-Norris wedding. During the strains of the wedding conventional prettiness and studied the approach of the maid of honorthe famous society belle, Doris Dabney, who seemed to advance like a goddess in an aura of blues and mauve-Tom shared in the general wave of admiration.

Tom looked closely, studying the beautiful features of the young woman as she passed near him to the bower of roses set up at one end of the Morris bailroom. He paused, almost staggering with the impression that suddenly came to him.

"It's Jane," he said half aloud, and as the strains of the wedding march continued and the Morris pedigree and the Norris millions were united in that famous marriage Tom stood as one in a daze. How had Jane Lane. the girl he had loved in his boyhood. whom he had not seen for five years, to be sure, but whom, in his heart of hearts, he loved still-how had this country girl been transported to this scene of wealth and elegance? had been as poor as he in the days when they went to school together, and there she was, dazzling in a gown that must have cost more than he earned in three months and wearing lewels worth a king's ransom.

What of Doris Dabney, the society beauty who had been expected to act as maid of honor? Could Jane be

Every one had expected Doris Dabney to act as maid of honor. Doris resembled Jane amazingly, for no one apparently realized that Doris had not appeared. He would talk to Jane and get the whole story.

When Tom had made his way to course or are not allowed to do so. Jane he noticed that she seemed intent on avoiding conversation. But he was insistent, and "Jane" uttered in a whisper banished her reserve. Tom rushed from expressions of joy at seeing her to a volley of questions, it is quite safe from native attack and Jane enthusiastically told him and is not yet within the Allies the whole secret. She was serving as governess in the Morris family. Her resemblance to Dorris Dabney had often been remarked.

Then the very day of the wedding Doris Dabney disappeared. It was a scandal, of course. She had eloped with her father's good-looking Danish chauffeur. If the news leaked out it would spoil everything. So Jane had been called to the rescue to play the part of Doris, to wear her gown and to appear with the priceless Dabney pearls and sapphires for the wedding.

Tom's ciation was divided between delight at having found Jane and joy at having found his "big story." was hurrying away when Jane, following him, put a hand on his arm.

"How did you happen to be here?" she ask. "You don't travel in the Morris set. Tell me, Tom"-there was anxious appeal in her voice-"are you still with the Morning Star?"

Then Tom, now more intent on his story than on his revived love for Jane, and Jane, herself afraid of being discovered, departed hurriedly some guests came toward them.

It was nearly midnight, and Tom was pounding the keys of his typewriter in the stifling atmosphere of the city room of the Morning Star He was just hammering out the last paragraph of his "big story," a real 'scoop" for the Morning Star, for none of the other papers could possibly have got wind of the scandalous elopement of the beautiful Doris.

Tom felt a pressure on his arm and a sweet voice at his side. It was Jane, Jane shorn of her jewels and with a simple street suit in place of

"Is it too late?" she asked breathlessly. "I came as soon as I could. I know when I ask you that you won't make use of the story I gave you. I told you because you are a friend."

Ten minutes later, Tom's story of the Morris-Norris nuptials, shorn of all its sensation, having gone to press, Tom and Jane left the office of the Morning Star. It was in a deserted surface car that led to the Morris home that Jane pressed Tom's hand to thank him for what he had

"It was hard," admitted Tom, "and I wouldn't have done it for anyone else in the world. But I've always loved you, Jane, and for you I would give up the biggest story I ever trapped down. And now I've found you, little Jane, I am not going to let you go."

And something in Jane's smile assured Tom that he had not made his sacrifice in vain.

What Does Vocational Mean?

The Vocational School fits people for the callings or voactions of life-it makes good farmers, good carpenters, good printers, good blacksmiths, good household managers, and good nurses.

The young people who take these vocational courses increase most rapidly their power to earn money.

We do not wish to make young people greedy, but we do wish to enable them to secure means for the honorable support of families and providing the good things which God intends all industrious and worthy people to enjoy.

And there is a pleasure in doing work well. Show me a boy who can really shoe a horse, and I will show you one who stands up erect and has the respect of his neighbors.

And more than that the boy who is learning the business of a farmer or a carpenter finds all his studies more interesting. He wants to know how to figure and keep accounts; he wants to know the secrets of plants and animals; he wants to be able to draw a house plan and to write a letter, and "do things" in a business-like way. And so it happens that many of the vocational students become the best all-around students.

And one thing more. In the Vocational Department, a single term gives the chance for greater progress that a single term in any other department. No one can be one term in the Vocational Schools without feeling that he has gotten immediate return for all his money and

The training of teachers is rather new in this country. It used to be supposed that anybody who was lame and could not work might be set to teach the children! The Berea Normal School has as its one aim the benefit of the children of the mountain region. It aims to give them teachers who will know their business and can cause the children to love their studies and make rapid progress toward manhood and womanhood,

It is one of the very few normal schools in the world in which the majority of the students are young men, and in which the chief atention is given in fitting teachers for work in the country districts.

The equipments of the Berea Normal School are great. Chief among them stands the wonderful Carnegie Library, and the Knapp Hall for practice teaching. The School has longer and shorter

A CHANCE FOR MUSIC LOVERS

Every girl desires to sit at the organ and call out its beautiful tones, while friends lean over her shoulder and sing.

A very special arrangement is made for this Fall Term, putting the price for instruction in the organ so low that everybody can have a chance to learn.

The new teacher, Miss Carman, fresh from the Metropolitan School of Music in New York City, will give this instruction herself, and the beautiful practice rooms in Music Hall are well equipped with instruments.

Every girl and half of our young nen ought to take the cabinet organ this Fall. Ask Professor Rigby!
